Renovation Improvements Completed at Edmonton Petroleum Golf & Country Club

October 2009 – Edmonton Petroleum Golf & Country Club has completed a three-year improvement program under the direction of golf course architect Michael Beebe, ASGCA, of Beebe & Associates, Inc. EPGCC, a private club in Edmonton, Alberta, has been working Beebe to address needed improvements to greens, tees, bunkers and associated elements as outlined in the Long Range Renovation Plan that was prepared in 2007.

Beebe designed the original golf course while working for Mark McCumber in the early 1990's. His continued involvement with the club over the years has led to the most recent improvements that were concluded this fall. According to Beebe, "the main focus of the renovation program was to correct deficiencies created during the original golf course construction. The work was confined to six holes and included new greens, tees, bunkers, irrigation and drainage improvements. The improvements will allow for more consistent maintenance practices throughout the golf course while also improving the playability of the golf course from a strategic standpoint."

Golf course construction was completed by Puddicombe Associates of Edmonton.
